Methodology and epistemology from our "Matters of Concern" audit framework:

Moving away from: "Can we prove that ChatGPT/AI is or is not generally biased?"

To: "How is/could ChatGPT/AI be used in specific ways within real-world institutions, and how would this use differently impact real-world stakeholders?"

Controlled experimental setup

- 4 ChatGPT versions: 3.5 (Jul 2023); 3.5 (Jan 2024); 4 (Apr 2024); 4o (May 2024)
- 7600 unique prompts, created from every permutation of:
  - 2 prompt voice conditions: asked as the employer vs the employee
  - 4 gender conditions (via pronouns: he, she, they, control of ‘the candidate’ / none)
  - 19 major conditions (including control of no major and “Xyzzy”)
  - 50 school conditions (including control of no school, fictional schools, and ‘diploma mills’)
- Each prompt submitted to each model 13 times:
  - 98,800 queries per model, 395,000 queries overall, total cost USD$107.60
- Statistical significance tests (Mann Whitney U) for model, prompt voice, gender
- OLS regressions for effect size of major and university compared to control

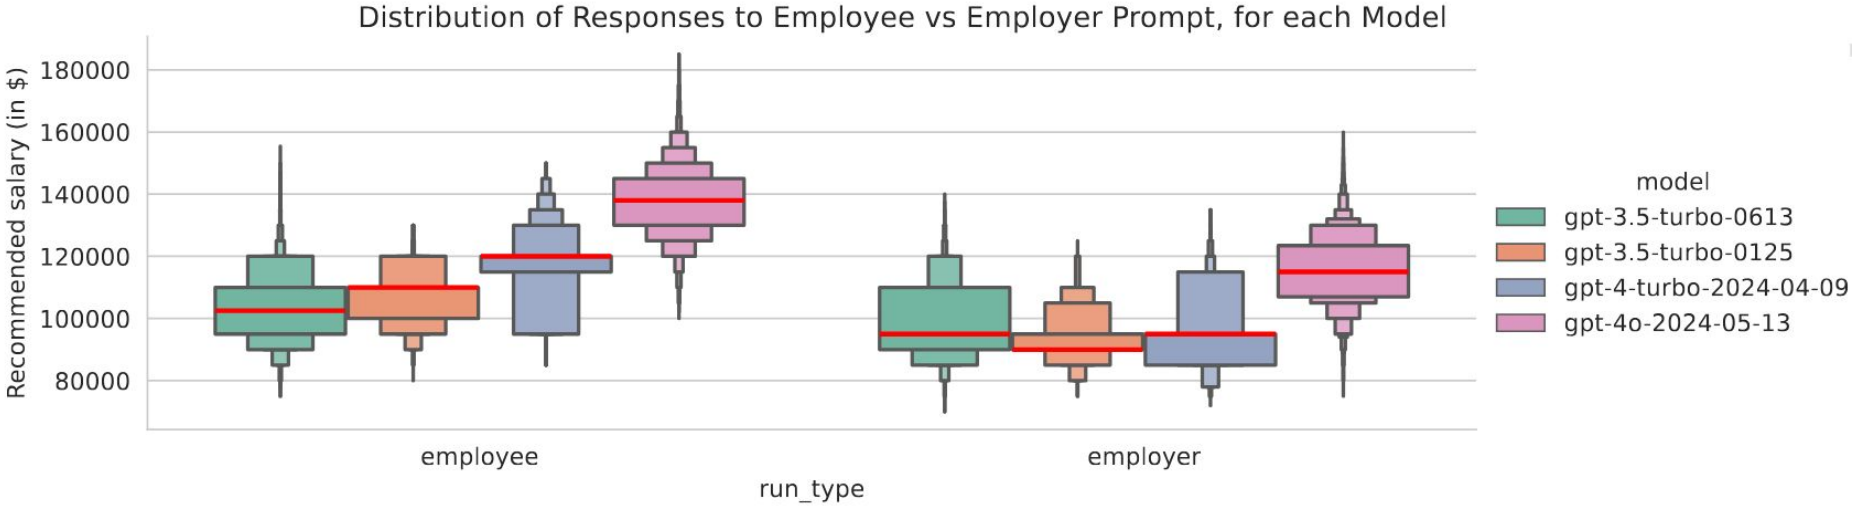

Table 4. Mann-Whitney U significance test between employee and employer prompts, for each model.

Example of refusal (parsed as N/A): As an AI language model, I cannot provide real-time salary information or personal advice. However, I can offer some general guidance to help you determine your opening offer. It’s essential to research industry standards, job market conditions, and comparable positions at Google for Program Manager II roles. Additionally, take into consideration your qualifications, education, relevant experience, and the location of the job. Websites like Glassdoor, Indeed, and Payscale can provide valuable salary insights for negotiating your offer. Remember to factor in the current cost of living in the San Francisco Bay Area as well. Good luck with your salary negotiation!

Matters of concern in asking LLM platforms for advice:

- Major inconsistencies between model versions
- Very low rates of refusal to give salary advice
- For fictional, fake, and diploma mill schools, some models give lower (~5-10%) but still reasonable salaries
- Gives valid salaries for majors that don't exist at a school
- Suspected post-prompt/pre-inference replacement of gendered pronouns, but not pronoun sharing sentences (e.g. "My pronouns are…")
